

Direct benefits of social forestry schemes in district Jaunpur

Tej Pratap Singh, K.P. Singh and N.K. Mishra

Received April 22, 2013 and Accepted June 29, 2013

ABSTRACT : Direct benefits of social forestry programmes where labour wages were paid to the participants of community plantations and special farm forestry schemes were initiated for SC/ST families. Seedlings were made available to all the interested farmers free of cost or at subsidized price. There were 80.50 per cent respondents who received seedlings free of cost and only 19.50 per cent were supplied at a subsidized cost.

Key Words : Recipients, cost-benefit ratio, variables.